When I interviewed Lt. McKown I asked him questions like, why he wanted to become a police officer, how becoming a police officer has helped him better his community, when he was a police officer why did he want to be in crime stoppers, and how did being in crime stoppers help him better his community.

He wanted to become a police officer because his father was one and enjoyed it. This drew him to the role of a police officer. He also liked the idea that he would get to help people. Becoming a police officer helped Lt. McKown better his community by stopping and preventing crimes.

Lt. McKown wanted to be in crime stoppers because it is a great organization. The idea of remaining completely anonymous helps people come forward that may not have originally come forward. Crime stoppers also helps the community by solving crimes.

After interviewing Lt. McKown, I have a better understanding of why he became a police officer, helping others. I also want to help people that cannot help themselves. That is one of the reasons I joined Student Crime Stoppers, helping others. A way to help our student community stay safe, by helping law enforcement solve crime.
